GRANGE ATTITUDE

other like reforms are right in principle, and will be right in practice if honestly and fearlessly translated into law. That these reforms have not brought about all the results that their advocates desired, no one will deny, but wise amendment and honest administration can be made to bring about the desired results.

A Better Dog Law.

For many years in Ohio, the farmers have sought better legislation for controlling the dog nuisance, but each year we have seemed to meet with failure. This failure has been largely due to the fact that we have failed to secure the co-operation and interest of those in other callings.

Tuberculosis in Cattle.

The last Legislature passed a law providing for inspection and condemnation of cattle found infected with tuberculosis and that the owners were to be reasonably compensated for cattle destroyed. This law has worked hardship on many farmers and stockmen, in that the State officials have gone on their farms, inspected, condemned and slaughtered their cattle, but as yet no farmer has received any compensation from the State. The approaching session of the Legislature should promptly pay all of these bills and make an emergency appropriation to cover such cases in the future. It is unreasonable for the State to destroy private property and expect the owner to wait more than two years for pay.

Presidential Suffrage.

There is an opportunity just now for the Granges' contention for equal suffrage to bear fruit. Both the political parties of Ohio have declared their support for the amendment to the constitution, thus taking this subject out of politics. Now let them prove that they mean what they say by granting presidential suffrage to the women of Ohio. This has been done in Illinois without a constitutional amendment; eminent legal authorities insist that it can be done in Ohio.

We trust that the incoming legislature will see fit to re-enact the law providing for separate ballots for the National and State ticket on presidential years. Good government demands that every candidate stands on his own record and that the people be given the greatest possible freedom of choice.

Taxation.

One of the distressing tendencies of the present is the alarming increase in the cost of government during the last decade. All recognize that, as the wants of the governed must necessarily increase, the tax has come when a halt must be called. We live in an age of construction and advancement. We would not turn back the wheels of progress but we must demand the same rigid economy in public as in private affairs. We have about reached the limit to which the tax spenders can go unless new sources of revenue are found.

That our tax system is not equitable, or that a vast amount of hidden wealth is escaping its just proportion of the cost of government, no one will deny. The devising of methods so that every dollar's worth of property in Ohio will be compelled to contribute in accordance to its earning power to the support of government is the big problem for the future.

We believe in a strict adherence to the Smith 1 per cent. Law and will oppose the abolishment of the State Levy, believing such action would have a crippling effect on road and school development. A strong committee on taxation has been appointed and we trust that their report will point the way toward a more equitable solution of our tax problem.

PROFITS FROM DAIRY COWS

Because more milk would be produced in the year and calves would be raised cheaper, farmers find it most profitable to have their cows freshen in the fall months. Cows bred now will drop calves by early fall.

The cow gives a large flow of milk at the beginning of the period of lactation. In the spring the milk yield, which gradually falls off, is suddenly increased when the cow is turned on fresh pasture.

Calves born in the fall need mainly milk and eat little grain during the period of winter feeding. When spring comes they are ready to be turned on pasture. Spring calves consume milk and grain during the cheap pasture season and require the same high-priced feeds during the following winter, when they are older and thus eat more. The fall-born calf at the same age needs only pasture.

At the Ohio Experiment Station some calves born in the fall were raised for about $5 less than others born in the spring. Under average farm conditions this difference would be even greater, as no grain would be fed to fall-born calves on pasture, while those at the Station were given grain because of a shortage of pasture.
